'Aber Day Three Days Later' kegger scheduled

By Rick Parker

Kaimin Reporter

Promoter Rod Harsell announced yesterday that 150 kegs of beer will be served to 999 people Saturday, May 21 near the Wye, close to the junction of Interstate 90 and U.S. Highway 93, at an outdoor concert billed as Aber Day Three Days Later.

The event is a private venture sponsored by Harsell's company, Fun Productions, but there is a snag. The company does not exist.

Fun Productions was involuntarily dissolved by the Montana Secretary of State's Office in 1981 for failure to file an annual report.

In order to receive a state permit to serve beer, Harsell must reinstate his company.

A spokeswoman from the Corporation and Tax Division in the Department of Revenue said a "certificate of good standing" has been issued to Harsell, a step toward reinstatement.

Joyce Vashro, a documents technician in the Office of the Secretary of State, said Harsell told her Monday he would send the necessary paperwork required to complete the procedure.

At the Department of Revenue, Tim Mulholland, assistant administrator in the Liquor

Division, said Harsell would not receive the permit unless the company is reinstated before May 21.

"It's up in the air right now," Mulholland said.

Because attendance is being kept under 1,000, the only requirements to hold the event are the state permit and a letter of recommendation from the City-County Health Department. Harsell said he has met the guidelines set by the health department.

And he is confident the permit is forthcoming. Tickets for the event, costing $12 each, will go on sale Friday.

The event is scheduled to last from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. with bands Montana, the Bop-a-Dips, and Dan Hart providing the music.

"The beer will not stop flowing," Harsell said. "They cannot drink me under. I'll put every penny into beer if I have to."

Harsell said the event will cost Fun Productions between $10,000 and $11,000. The profits, if any, will go to Fun Productions.

The event was originally

Prospective RAs fight tough job competition

By Jerry Wright

Kaimin Staff Reporter

By the end of next week, 80 people will know whether they still have a chance to fill one of the 12 Resident Assistant positions in the dorms that will be open next fall.

The 80 are left after two interviews narrowed the field from the 300 people who initially applied for RA last January and February.

To be considered for an RA position, each of the applicants had to have a 2.0 GPA, some residence halls experience (which could mean having lived there), a desire to work with people and a commitment to stay at the University of Montana for the full year, according to Ron Brunell, director of Residence Halls.

Applicants who met the requirements then completed two 15-minute interviews — one during Winter Quarter and one Spring Quarter. They also had to submit letters of recommendation from four people.

Scores on the interviews and the recommendations were used to pick people for the final interview. This year's 80 finalists are being interviewed this week.

The selection committee, composed of Brunell and the head RA from each residence hall, will also be looking at the applicants' academic records and getting recommendations from current residence hall staff members and other university staff members, such as professors, before making its decisions, Brunell said.

Scores on interviews and recommendations will be weighed equally when making decisions, he said, adding that people may have lower interview scores than others, but be selected on the merits of better recommendations.

PLO, Syria balk at withdrawal attempt in Lebanon

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization and Syria will not accept a U.S.-mediated draft agreement for removing foreign forces from Lebanon without settling issues so complex they could take months to resolve.

Syrian determination to hold out for concessions has been bolstered by the Soviet Union, which Western diplomats say has replenished Syria's military equipment destroyed by the Israelis during last summer's fighting.

The Soviets also have increased their presence in Syria since Israel invaded Lebanon last June 6 to destroy PLO guerrilla bases.

"Given certain circumstances, yes, I feel they (the Syrians) will withdraw," said one European diplomat who spoke on condition he not be identified. "But they feel the present circumstances, which means the draft agreement, conveys to Israel in the Syrian view non-merited advantages."

The diplomat said if the Syrians agree to withdraw, "it will only be at the end of a long process." The Syrians are in Lebanon under an Arab League mandate to police the armistice that halted the 1975-76 civil war.

Syria has not detailed conditions for pulling out its estimated 38,000 troops since Secretary of State George P. Shultz won tentative agreement from Israel for removing its 25,000 soldiers. But Israel has said it will remove Israeli forces only when Syria and the PLO start withdrawing.

That agreement followed nearly six months of negotiations among Israel, Lebanon and the United States and took a shuttle mission by Shultz to complete.

However, Syria's ruling Baath Party said the Syrians would leave "as soon as Lebanon regains its freedom and expels the (Israeli) invaders from its territory."

State-controlled news media contend the Shultz plan does not meet these conditions. Government newspapers have been highlighting reports of opposition to the plan by Lebanese rivals of President Amin Gemayel, including the leader of the Syrian-backed Druse militia, Walid Jumblatt.

In an interview with the newspaper Al Baath, Jumblatt was quoted as saying the U.S. plan provides Israel with political and military gains "at the expense of the common national security."

The Baath Party newspaper Al-Thawra said yesterday the agreement was a "vivid example" of U.S. support for Israel and "threatens directly the security of Syria, its legitimate interests in Lebanon and historic, fraternal relations between Syria and Lebanon."

A spokesman for President Hafez Assad claimed Saudi Arabia shared Syria's views on the dangers in the agreement. The spokesman made the claim following a two-day meeting between Assad and King Fahd in Jidda that ended

Monday.

U.S. diplomats said during Shultz's visit to Damascus last Saturday that the agreement was between Israel and Lebanon and would have to be followed by negotiations between the Lebanese and Syrians for removal of Syria's forces.

But a well-informed source, who asked not to be named, said Israel and the United States had signed a letter of understanding which says the agreement would not become effective until certain conditions were met.

These include a return of the 16 Israelis held prisoner by Syria and the PLO since last summer. Other conditions were not revealed, but it was as-

Clarity needed for peace

What's going on in Lebanon? There are too many rumors surrounding the issue of withdrawing Israeli and Syrian troops; so many that it appears the negotiations will get bogged down during a time when a quick solution is needed before all-out warfare breaks out again.

Kaimin editorial

This much is known: on Monday, Syria warned of a wide-scale war with Israel and rejected the pullout plan which has taken Secretary of State George Schultz almost six months to arrange. The plan calls for withdrawing Israeli forces only if Syrian and Palestinian forces also withdraw. It also calls for Israeli and Lebanese patrols in Lebanon. In the meantime, Syria says it won't accept the plan without settling issues so complex they would take months to overcome.

Exactly what those differences are appear to be speculation. Also, Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam sounded vague when he said his country "expects the Soviet Union to fulfill its commitments toward Syria which are embodied in the friendship agreement" if war broke out. Does this mean just weaponry or actual troop commitments?

Now western diplomats are assuming what the Syrians want. They expect the country will demand safe passage of its troops from Israeli patrols through the Bekaa Valley which leads to the Syrian border and also assurances that the Lebanese won't take an anti-Syrian line. But does that mean before, during or after withdrawal?

Mystery also surrounds the Israelis. According to the Associated Press, a well informed source who asked not to be identified said yesterday that Israel and the United States signed a letter of understanding which said the pullout plan would not be followed by the Israelis unless certain conditions are met. The only one actually mentioned is the return of 16 Israeli soldiers held prisoner by the PLO and Syria since last summer.

It's hard to tell which side is telling the truth. For example, on Sunday, Schultz said he was encouraged by the support of Saudi King Fahd, who supposedly tried to convince Syrian President Hafez Assad to favor the withdrawal agreement. However, a press release from Assad's office in Damascus, which appeared after the two leaders' conversations in Jidda, said Saudi Arabia agreed with the Syrians' objections to the pact — whatever they were.

Perhaps the Syrians' threats of war and Soviet involvement are only a bluff. Still, such a bluff shouldn't be taken lightly. The rumors about the withdrawal plan should be cleared up and negotiations should resume immediately. Direct Soviet involvement could result in reciprocal involvement by the United States and what a mess that would be.

A LITTLE MORE FUND INFUSION, AN ANTENNA TRANSPLANT, THE CHANCE OF TOTAL RECOVERY IS LOOKING GOOD....

Rygg-marole Brian L. Rygg

Fear and loathing revisited

Paul Miske was running for his life.

Miske, a disc jockey, had been at a party in Pacifica, Calif.; an argument over what sort of music should be played had turned violent, and 19-year-old Miske had been forced to flee.

After diving through the kitchen window of a nearby home, Miske woke the family and asked for sanctuary. He didn't have it for long. Half a dozen youths were pounding on the back door, screaming threats, and Miske was steered out the front door.

Paul Miske, 19, was stabbed to death in the driveway.

My first reaction upon reading of this — as well as the reaction of most people I talked to — was one of disgust and horror, not only at what the mob had done but even moreso at what the family had done. This seemed beyond the 1964 Kitty Genovese case of watching and not doing anything — these people had put him out the door and virtually into his killer's hands!

But I was forced to change my views yesterday after a phone call with a spokesman for The Associated Press, whence the story came. He said that there was "no question" that the family was under duress and had legitimate cause for fear, as the mob was succeeding in breaking the door down. That made the family's action a bit more understandable — certainly not admirable, not very moral, perhaps still not justifiable, but ... more understandable. I had found it much easier to presume to judge the family when I believed that, as I had read in the original AP story, the youths were merely "pounding on the back door and screaming threats," than I do now, knowing that within moments they had already broken part way in.

But why did so many of us originally focus our disgust on the family, at worst accessory to the murder, instead of on the murderous mob itself? In part, I think, it was because the family represented common humanity (or inhumanity), and we could (we thought) imagine ourselves in the family's situation; we were certain that we would have behaved more responsibly. Perhaps we would have, and it's comforting to think so.

But we may have been simply avoiding contemplation of the mob. A mob can seem something alien, devoid of humanity. But in truth a mob contains the essence of base humanity without the impediment of human virtue. Henry David Thoreau wrote, "The mass never comes up to the standard of its best member, but on the contrary degrades itself to the level with the lowest." People in mobs do things they would not otherwise consider. And just as we could have been asleep when someone burst in requesting sanctuary, so could we have been at a party when an argument became violent. We all have capacities for violence.

And what of those members of that party in Pacifica who did become a mob? They vanished within minutes of the murder, just before the police (called by a neighbor) arrived. As of yesterday, no arrests had been made.

Letters

To the source

Editor: I would like to address the abortion issue by going to the source of the problem. We all know we can never solve problems by battling at its symptoms, but by dealing with the source of the problem. I am writing this letter as a concerned person. Please hear me out.

The problem is, we have lost our concept of self government. I am not trying to be righteous, but only pointing to the source of the problem. We all know that pregnancy doesn't just happen, but takes an act of sex on the part of TWO people.

A man has no right to get a woman pregnant, and then be of little or no assistance after the fact. I observed my own wife's physical and mental reactions during her two pregnancies and tried to be as much help as possible. We also used the Lamaze method both times, and I waited on her in both the labor and delivery room. I wanted to take part of the responsibility. The period of understanding and helpfulness also extends after the birth. All this involves exercising a little self government. I realize I didn't have to bear the children, but then again none of us have any choice what sex we are either.

At this point, I would like to point out one case that shows we are dealing with actual life in an unborn child. Marcus Richardson was born on Jan. 1, 1972 in Cincinnati, Ohio. His age, at birth, was 18 weeks. He still lives today to my knowledge.

A man, in his decision and desire to have sex with a woman, needs to have strong consideration for her. If he must have sex and has no desire for children, then he should use a reliable form of contraception, or have no sex at all. This doesn't infringe on the man's rights any more than an unborn baby's rights.

The woman, likewise, needs to exercise equal responsibility. She has as much a hand in the choice to have sex as the man. If she must have sex, and has no desire for children, then she also should use a reliable form of contraception, or have no sex at all. This isn't infringing on her rights any more than the unborn baby's rights (or lack of rights when abortion becomes an option).

I often wonder what degree of guilt and sorrow men and women feel as a result of abortion. Maybe it would be nicer to put the child up for adoption to the tens of thousands of people who wait in line for years to adopt a newborn because they can't have one themselves. I also wonder, does an unmarried relationship (where no children are wanted on the part of one or both parties) have to have sex in it at all, when the possible consequences are considered? Maybe restraint is an aspect of self government. Too often people want sex, but don't want the responsibility of a child.

Looking at the issue from another viewpoint, some people go all out to save the baby seals, save the snail darters, save the whale, and be against capital punishment. But when it comes to "extracting" an unborn child from the womb, they have no problem with that. I don't understand that kind of logic.

If we exercised self government (either by restraint or responsibility from both parties), we wouldn't have an abortion issue to deal with. The Supreme Court never would have had to decide on the issue. There would be few if any unwanted pregnancies. And should there be an "accident," don't blame the child by aborting it. If there is a right to choice involved here, then let it be for all, including the unborn.

University president forcing professor to see psychiatrist

HAYWARD, CA (CPS) — Cal State University-Hayward's president may be trying to force a political scientist to see a psychiatrist as a way of forcing the professor into early retirement, says Prof. Marilyn June Blawie.

"I'm getting 'The Golden Handshake,'" she claims.

Blawie has sued campus President Ellis McCune over the issue, getting a temporary injunction against McCune's forcing her to see the psychiatrist until the case goes to court next month.

McCune's effort to make Blawie see psychiatrist Dr. King Price stems from a general campus effort to make sure that employees can do their jobs, explains Dr. Robert Tyndall, the 19-campus Cal State system's vice chancellor for faculty and staff affairs.

Tyndall, however, would not comment "on a specific personnel case" such as Blawie's.

He did say that forcing faculty members to submit to mental exams "is very rare."

The University of Nevada's recent adoption of a measure that allows the university president to force faculty members to take mental exams has forced what one faculty member in Nevada calls a "mass exodus" of teachers from there.

Cal State has had a mental exam provision "since the early '60s," Tyndall says.

Tyndall adds that if a faculty member refuses to take the exam, "then we have penalties which could lead to discharge."

Blawie sees McCune's order that she visit the psychiatrist as a tactic to make her leave the faculty.

"Something has to go (when the enrollment decreases), and the administration would prefer faculty would go. It's a question of dollars," she said.

Blawie, 53, has been at Hayward since 1959, and "there have been a number of attempts to remove the people in my department. I am not the only person who has been accorded this treatment." She could not name any other specific cases, however.

She claims that the university tried to make her quit in 1980 when it assigned her to teach some "dumb, dumb English" courses. She was able to keep her political science courses at the same time.

Blawie refused to see the psychiatrist without having either a union representative or her attorney present. When the school refused to comply with her request, Blawie asked for and got the injunction.

Heart Association Jumpathon nets $535.20

The Jump Rope for Heart benefit on the University of Montana campus May 1 raised $535.20 for the Montana Heart Association.

The statewide event was sponsored for the third straight year by the Montana Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance to promote physical education and to raise funds to help the Heart Association fight heart disease and stroke.

The event was coordinated on campus by the UM Recreation Student Association.

Students participating in the event formed teams and obtained pledges for the total number of minutes their teams jumped rope, for up to a three-hours.

Participants received prizes such as Jump Rope for Heart t-shirts, a warm-up suit, and windbreakers for collecting large numbers of pledges. Other prizes were donated by the Sandwich Shoppe, Big Sky Cookies and the Pepsi Cola company.

Libraries must keep up with technology — Bush

By Timothy K. Huneck
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

Libraries must demonstrate a desire to keep up with advances in technology, or face being replaced by commercial information services, according to Douglas Bush, candidate for dean of the University of Montana library services.

Bush, assistant university librarian for information services at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah and one of the five finalists for the UM dean position, said library services are in danger of not being "needed as fully" as they once were.

Through home computer terminals and data bases, corporations are able to offer many of the services libraries normally provide — especially reference material — to an increasing number of people, including university faculty and students, Bush said.

Unless libraries "show they are interested" in keeping up with the "technological revolution," they face extinction, he said. However, if libraries keep up with technology and demonstrate the ability to continue to do so, corporations will include libraries in their information services and libraries will continue to provide a vital public service, he said.

If he is named dean, Bush said he would hope to see the library use more computers and automation, but said it would be "premature" for him to propose a program for changing the UM library. It is "beyond a dean to come in and start making changes, or feel he can make changes on his own," Bush said.

Bush said he is a "participation manager," allowing people who use the library to participate in the library's operation. One of the first things Bush said he would do if named dean would be to meet with students, faculty and library staff to get their ideas on improving the library.

Bush said he is a "specialist in administration," has good communication skills and is able to "get things done." Being a good administrator is "critically important to running a library" because libraries are part of a large university bureaucracy, he said.

Funding libraries is becoming more difficult because libraries must be able to compete with other departments to raise money, he said.

If named dean, he said he would attempt to raise money for the library by "organizing priorities" and by being thoroughly prepared when presenting budget requests to the legislature, or to private donors. Budget requests must "make sense" and "those who are prepared are remembered" when they ask for money, Bush said.

Bush, 52, has degrees in library science, philosophy of education and history. He has been at BYU since 1972 and was Assistant Director of Libraries at San Diego State University from 1968-1972.

At BYU he instituted a leisure reading area where students can go to read best sellers and has been responsible for involving BYU in the Research Library Group, a national organization that connects 26 "major research libraries" by computer.

Bush would like to come to UM, he said, because he is interested in a change and a new challenge. "UM is one of the major institutions in the west" and, "from what I've seen, provides a pleasant learning and working atmosphere," he said.

Workshops for flag girls, twirlers for UM Marching Band start today

By Janelle Patterson
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

Two workshops will be conducted this week for prospective UM flag girls, twirlers, assistant drum major and assistant flag coordinator for the UM Marching Band.

The workshops will be 6:30 p.m. Wednesday and 1:30 p.m. Saturday in Room One of the Music Building, said Tom Cook, director of bands and associate professor of music.

Cook said "anyone and everyone" may audition May 16 for the paid positions.

He said the band is looking for 16 to 18 flag girls to carry and twirl large flags at Grizzly football games and one to three twirlers to carry batons. The number selected "depends very much on the number and quality of those who turn out," he said.

The flag girls "need not have had any actual experience," Cook said.

Techniques used by flag girls and twirlers will be explained at the workshops, where the applicants will be trained "from the ground up," he said.

"When they audition, they will show how quickly they can pick up things," he said.

Flag girls and twirlers will be paid $50 stipends for the marching band season, which lasts from the beginning of the school year through the end of November, when the football season ends.

Auditions for assistant drum major and assistant flag coordinator, a new position, will also be held.

The assistant flag coordinator is needed because "with the number of flags we have on the field we found it difficult for one person to coordinate all the flags," Cook said.

The assistant coordinator, a non-marching participant who teaches the routines, will be paid a stipend of $100 for the season, as will the assistant drum major.

Cook said the band will not attempt to fill all flag girl and twirler positions this spring so that freshmen and transfer students may audition for the positions in the fall.

Incoming freshmen may have to take math test

MILES CITY (AP) — Students entering Montana's University System this fall may get a mathematics examination, the state Board of Public Education was told yesterday.

Carrol Krause, deputy commissioner of higher education, told the board that the test would be used to tell school systems how well they are teaching.

Krause said the first draft of a mathematics competency test had been written, and he hoped an examination would be ready by this fall for incoming college freshmen.

Krause said the purpose of the test would be to help promote courses in high school to prepare students for college.

"We're not talking about asking some really easy stuff," Krause said of the math examination. "It will test their mettle."

He said general statistics on scores could be published, but added that scores from individual schools would not be made public.

"If you single out schools, they probably will not cooperate," he said.

However, the University System would have the information and would share it privately with the school districts, Krause said.

One danger, he said, would be that administrators might use the scores to evaluate math teachers.

He said the commissioner of higher education's office recommends that high schools teach Algebra 1, Algebra 2 and geometry.

"From the data we have, we discourage the teaching of calculus," he said.

Krause said there was no move to change Montana's open admissions policy, under which all graduates of the state's high schools would be eligible to be admitted to University System units.

"We have to tell the students what's expected of them," he said. "College will cost an extra $5,000 for the extra year of remediation. Mom and Dad ought to know that."

Credit union returns to campus

Members of the Missoula Federal Credit Union no longer have to go to the main office to conduct business. Since April 4, there has been a branch window of the union in the University Bookstore.

The old University of Montana Credit Union merged with Missoula Federal in January 1981 and since then members have had to go to the main office at 2001 Brooks. Now, withdrawals, deposits, loan payments, and services such as buying traveler's checks can all be taken care of at the bookstore.

"A person should be able to do almost anything they could do at the main branch," said Gina Willette, manager and sole employee of the university branch. The branch, however, cannot approve loans, she said.

The credit union is open to anyone who does not belong to another credit union. It pays higher interest rates on savings and charges less for loans than most banks, she said.

About 10 people have joined the credit union at the new branch since last month, said Willette, adding that she expects more people will join in the fall.

The UM branch was opened as a convenience to UM staff and students.

Reagan considering Scowcroft recommendations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan met with his national security advisers yesterday to consider shifting the American position in arms negotiations with the Soviet Union, while the president also pressed his case with Congress for deployment of the new MX missile.

An administration official said yesterday's meeting with advisers "was not a decision-making session," but added that by the time talks with the Soviet Union are resumed, the treaty that Reagan proposed a year ago may be modified.

The official, who declined to be quoted by name, said Reagan did not choose among the options presented to him for compromising differences with the Soviet Union — and also with Congress.

But he said the discussion was aimed at loosening restrictions on the number of long-range missiles both sides can retain and to promote a shift from multi-warhead to single-warhead rockets.

"We are going to move in the direction of the Scowcroft Commission report," said the official. He stressed that the U.S. arms control effort would continue to seek substantial reductions in strategic nuclear warheads.

The commission, headed by Brent Scowcroft, a former national security adviser, called for deployment of 100 new MX missiles, each with 10 warheads, as an interim step during the development of a smaller, single-warhead missile.

The modifications considered at the White House and earlier by an interagency panel would adopt the smaller missile as a U.S. and Soviet goal while also lifting or even removing the ceiling Reagan sought to impose on larger missiles on both sides.

To try to gain Congressional support for the MX, the White House also scheduled further negotiations yesterday with a group of moderate Democrats and Republicans who wrote Reagan asking him for "a firm commitment" to change the U.S. position and to begin development of a new single-warhead missile.

Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., an early supporter of a policy shift, said the group had requested a letter from Reagan outlining his position. Gore was also meeting with Scowcroft.

Meanwhile, Richard Perle, assistant secretary of defense for international security policy, told a Senate appropriations subcommittee, that unless the MX is approved "we won't be able to achieve any kind of agreement" with the Soviet Union.

Defending Reagan's commitment to arms control, Perle cautioned "don't ask us to demonstrate sincerity by getting a quick agreement that we don't believe is in our national interest."

He told reporters later Reagan was interested in a "build-down" proposal by Sens. Charles Percy, R-Ill., William Cohen, R-Maine, and Sam Nunn, D-Ga. It would have the United States and the Soviet Union destroy two nuclear warheads for each new warhead deployed.

Two prominent senators, Republican John Tower of Texas and Democrat Henry Jackson of Washington, also took strong stands in support of the MX.

Kelly vows to continue fight against Abscam conviction

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Richard Kelly vowed yesterday to continue his fight for vindication after a federal appeals court in Washington reinstated his Abscam conviction.

Anthony Battaglia, attorney for the Florida Republican, said ion from anybody to indicate any crime was in progress until the FBI created the crime," Kelly said.

Justice Department spokesman John Russell in Washington said, "We are pleased that the court of appeals agrees with our decisions in this case."

house in January 1980. The government claimed it was bribe money for political favors and came from undercover agents posing as Arab sheiks in an FBI sting to uncover political corruption.

Kelly has steadfastly maintained his innocence. He claimed he became suspicious of people around him and swore he took the money as part of his own investigation into seedy characters.

Kelly, 58, is the only one of seven congressmen and one senator convicted in the Abscam cases to have his charges dismissed by a judge. He was never sentenced.

"There's just one problem, there isn't any word anywhere in the evidence or in any opinion from anybody to indicate any crime was in progress until the FBI created the crime." (Richard Kelly)

he was considering a "rather unique request" to petition the full U.S. Court of Appeals for a rehearing. If denied, he would proceed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

A federal jury convicted Kelly on Jan. 26, 1981, of bribery, conspiracy and other federal crimes. In tossing out the conviction of May 14, 1982, U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant ruled that Kelly had been the victim of impermissible government entrapment.

But the Court of Appeals concluded that "the FBI's conduct in furtherance of its Abscam operation, insofar as it involved Kelly, simply did not reach intolerable levels."

Kelly claimed the three-judge appellate panel had been confused "by FBI propaganda" and noted that in the opinion there was "heavy emphasis on the absolute necessity that we have undercover operations ... especially dealing with political corruption."

"There's just one problem, there isn't any word anywhere in the evidence or in any opin-

World news

• A report released yesterday by the World Health Organization in Geneva, Switzerland estimates that about half of the world's 4.5 billion people would be "immediate victims" of an all-out nuclear war.

The report, prepared by ten scientists representing the United States, the Soviet Union, France, Britain, Japan, Sweden, Austria, Venezuela, Nigeria and the Netherlands, listed a potential total of 1.15 billion dead and 1.1 billion injured in outlining the worst of three war scenarios which it said "do not include the extreme views." It warned that the chances of injured survivors receiving any medical attention are "next to nil" and voiced doubt that "even a comprehensive civil defense policy would reduce significantly the number of casualties."

Compiled from various studies, the all-out nuclear war described in the 151-page report assumes that 10,000 megatons of nuclear bombs are exploded all over the world — 90 percent of them in Europe, Asia and North America. The report says that a war with smaller tactical weapons totaling 20 megatons and limited to military targets in Central Europe would claim about 9 million dead or severely injured and as many suffering lesser injuries. In the third scenario, which supposes that the House of Parliament in London was the target of a single one-megaton bomb — 80 times the explosive power of the Hiroshima bomb — the report lists 1.8 million dead and 1.7 million injured as potential casualties.

THE NATION

• Ninety parents trying to unravel a nightmare jammed into a hall to discuss the day care center they trusted — and the teacher who police say may have molested up to 70 boys and girls.

Reno, Nevada Police Sgt. Greg Dion said detectives have 40 documented cases of molestation and estimate they will have 60 or 70 by the time they have interviewed the more than 80 children who attended Paopoe Palace Academy, a day care center with a mostly middle-class clientele.

Police say the abused children were as young as two-and-a-half and as old as 12 and divided equally between boys and girls. They allege that Stephen Boatwright, 35, described as a caring teacher, well-liked by students and parents, was in reality a cunning child molester who sexually abused the children almost from the time his mother opened the center in 1979. The district attorney's office filed four counts of sexual assault against Boatwright. Unable to post $200,000 bail, he is in the Reno City Jail.

• The man who police accuse of being California's most successful bank robber — nicknamed the Paper Bag Bandit — was arrested yesterday and charged with 54 federal counts of bank robbery.

When Robert Allan Bray, 31, was arrested at 5:30 a.m. at a girlfriend's apartment in Cudahy, about eight miles southeast of Los Angeles, police say he had $4.20 in his pockets and as he was leaving he said to the girl "I guess I'll see you in 1997." Bray, who allegedly turned to bank robbery to support a drug habit, supposedly netted $60,000 in bank robberies since the bandit first struck on Jan. 12.

MONTANA

• The state Public Service Commission yesterday approved an amended draft order requiring the Montana Power Co. to return $500,000 to its electricity customers. The rebate requirement is part of an order, to be signed by mid-week after final drafting, which makes permanent $3.1 million of a temporary $3.3 million annual rate increase which went into effect on Oct. 19, 1982. The commission agreed that the refund to residential customers should be in the form of a one-time credit on monthly bills. The rebate is expected to be not more than a few cents. However, the commission's decision prevented a major rate increase which the company had requested.

Reporter stays mum on source of fake Hitler documents

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — The reporter who bought the fake Adolf Hitler diaries for Stern magazine claimed yesterday he never suspected the journals were phony, but he refused to reveal the source of the documents.

"Of course I was gullible," Gerd Heidemann told a news conference at his Hamburg home, breaking a five-day silence. "I am no Hitler researcher."

Stern spent millions of dollars for the diaries and has filed a fraud suit against Heidemann. The reporter claimed the man who supplied them swore they were retrieved "right out of the (Nazi) plane."

The purported diaries of the Nazi dictator were said to have been carried in an aircraft that left Berlin April 21, 1945, near the end of World War II. The plane crashed in a field near Boernersdorf in what is now East Germany.

Asked why he refused to reveal his source, Heidemann replied: "Because this man probably also was deceived. He is trying on his own to clear up where they come from and if they are forgers, to identify them," he said, in apparent reference to whoever supplied his contact with the bogus diaries.

"As long as he still investigates for me, and I still harbor a little bit of hope because of him, I cannot disclose him to the public ... I am now patiently awaiting his phone call."

Heidemann, 51, was flanked by his Frankfurt lawyer, Egon Geis. He had been in seclusion since Friday, when government investigators declared the diaries were fakes.

Stern, which resold publication rights to the 62 volumes, announced it would refund all the money paid by the other publications. It named neither the publications nor the amounts.

Heidemann said he did not defraud Stern — maintaining the magazine bought the documents "piece by piece" and "they could have stopped it at any time."

Peter Koch, one of two top Stern editors who resigned over the affair, said the magazine paid $4.1 million for the diaries. Heidemann said the price was $3.3 million.

Stern, in a telex to the news media, continued to hold Heidemann solely responsible.

"Heidemann had every reason to identify his middlemen to the state prosecutor," the magazine said, adding that the reporter had been fired effective Tuesday.

Stern, which filed a criminal complaint in a Hamburg court, contends there is no "source" for the documents and that Heidemann acted on his own.

Committee approves aid to Salvadoran army

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday unanimously approved $20 million more for training the embattled Salvadoran army this year, but rejected an additional $60 million that President Reagan had requested.

While the amount approved fell short of what the president had asked for, William Schneider Jr., undersecretary of state for security assistance, commended the committee "for its progress" in granting the additional money.

But afterward, Schneider said the rejection of the president's full request increases the risk that U.S. support will not be enough for the Salvadoran government to succeed in its war with leftist guerrillas.

If accepted by the full Senate and the House, the $20 million would boost U.S. military aid to El Salvador this year to $76.3 million. Reagan had sought a total of $136.3 million for the Salvadoran army in its war with leftist guerrillas.

The Senate committee also approved $76.3 million in military aid to El Salvador for fiscal 1984, which starts Oct. 1. Reagan had requested $86.3 million in military aid for fiscal 1984.

The committee's vote also raised the non-military aid to El Salvador by $25 million to $140 million this year and set the amount for fiscal 1984 at $120 million.

The compromise proposal, sponsored by Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., was approved on a 17-0 vote after the committee had rejected, 11-6, an amendment by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., to grant the president the full amounts he had requested.

The Kassebaum proposal earmarks the new $20 million for training of Salvadoran soldiers in the United States. Her amendment also limits the number of American advisers in El Salvador to 55, the number the administration has held to since dispatching advisers to the Central American country in March 1981.

Liver transplant is successful

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Surgeons at the University of Minnesota yesterday successfully transplanted a donated liver into 11-month-old Amy Hardin, for whom they said time had just about run out.

"She was quite close to the end of the line. We were getting a little bit desperate," said Dr. John Najarian, who headed the team of surgeons that performed the three-hour operation.

Najarian said he was "quite pleased" with the way the baby girl responded to the operation which went "without a hitch." Amy was listed in stable condition in the pediatric intensive care unit at University of Minnesota Hospitals, where she will remain until the end of May.

During that period two nurses will keep a round-the-clock watch on the infant during what is considered the most critical period for possible organ rejection.

Amy is the 12th liver transplant patient since the program was reinstituted at the hospital in 1980 and the seventh surviving recipient. She is tied as the youngest liver transplant patient. Both she and her predecessor, Jamie Fiske of Massachusetts, were 344 days old when the operation occurred.

Amy was born with biliary atresia in which the bile ducts malfunction and the liver becomes hard.

After 34 years

'Charlie Two Shoes' reunited with Marine buddies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Chinese farmer known as "Charlie Two Shoes" to U.S. Marines who befriended him as a boy 34 years ago arrived in America yesterday and burst into tears of joy as he embraced one of his "old Marine buddies."

"I'm so excited," Cui Zhixi said in slow, clear English as he left customs at San Francisco International Airport to begin a six-month visit of the United States. "I can hardly believe it. This was my dream, but now it's coming true."

Cui, 49, was 12 years old when Marines stationed in the northeastern China city of Qingdao after World War II took "Charlie Two Shoes" under their wing.

As the Marines pulled out in 1949, two months before Communist forces arrived in their takeover of the Chinese mainland, Charlie asked if his buddies would someday send for him. They said they would, and Charlie didn't forget.

Cui and the friend he embraced, ex-Marine Roy Sibit, boarded United Airlines Flight 448 for Cleveland, where other ex-Marines planned to greet Cui before he left for Sibit's home in Tallmadge, Ohio.

"Roy Sibit was like my father," Cui said. "He never left my thoughts ... God has been helping me and Roy."

Sibit, 54, an international plant contact for Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., said, "This is one of the happiest moments of my life. Of everything I had to leave in China, Charlie was the most precious to me."

Sibit said that in China, Charlie "and some other boys sold us peanuts and eggs — we had only powdered eggs — and the Marines let him take care of the fires in front of their tents."

When the Marines offered to let the boy live with them, "his father brought him to the base; he was proud that he could continue his education," said Sibit, then a private first class.

Cui lived at the barracks for four years, wearing a corporal's uniform — "like a regular Marine," he recalled proudly — going to an American school, and learning American pastimes. "I taught him to box, and he learned songs like 'America the Beautiful,'" Sibit said.

After the Marines left, the boy returned to his family, relearned Chinese and later was sent by the government to college to study agriculture and silkworms.

Concealing his knowledge of English and ties to Americans, Cui said he did "not dare to save" souvenirs, instead he remembered names and U.S. addresses "by my mind" and used English only "in my prayers."

Although foreign connections got many Chinese in trouble in the tumultuous 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, Cui said he never suffered.

Sibit said he got three letters from Cui in 1949 and nothing again until May 1980, a year after Washington and Peking established diplomatic relations.

Excited by the letter, Cui's former Marine buddies lobbied to get visas for their friend, his wife and three children. A philanthropist who heard of their efforts, Leon Toups of Houma, La., provided the $1,625 round-trip plane fare from China.

Sibit plans to hold a reunion May 15 at his home, where Cui will stay during his six-month visa. He hopes to bring his family later.

Kegger

scheduled for Aber Day, May 18, but a call from University of Montana President Neil Bucklew persuaded Harsell to change it to the following Saturday.

Harsell said Bucklew was concerned that the kegger would be associated with the university and would draw students away from Aber Day activities on campus.

"This is not a university function," Harsell said.

Harsell has been unsuccessful the past two years in trying to organize similar events at the Missoula County Fairgrounds, largely because of the efforts of County Commissioner Barbara Evans.

"Barbara's not getting her hands on this one," Harsell said.

Evans said Harsell was "very irresponsible," but she is not planning to take any action to stop the event. "It is incongruous at a time when, as a nation, we are beginning to realize the danger of drunk driving," she said of the event.

Harsell said he would provide transportation to and from the Wye if enough people express an interest.

If the details are worked out, and the kegger goes on, Harsell said he hopes to make it an annual event.

Lebanon

sumed if Syria holds out for concessions, Israel would not implement its part of the agreement.

Further complicating the situation are the interests of the PLO, which maintains 10,000 to 12,000 fighters in the Bekaa and around the northern Lebanese city of Tripoli.

Those guerrillas were deployed outside Beirut and were not involved in last summer's evacuation of PLO forces from the city's Moslem western sector under an agreement negotiated by U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib.

Bassam Abu Sharif, spokesman for one of the PLO's more radical factions, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, said problems include the safety of the half-million Palestinians he said still live in Lebanon. He accused the Lebanese government of harassing them so they would emigrate.

One Western diplomat said it was unclear where the Palestinian fighters in Lebanon would go. Last summer Habib negotiated for weeks before enough Arab governments agreed to provide havens for the PLO fighters.

The Department of Zoology

Announces a Lecture Entitled

GENETIC ASPECTS OF CONSERVATION BIOLOGY

to be presented by

Dr. Michael Soule

from the Center for Transcultural Studies, Los Angeles, CA

Dr. Soule is a geneticist and conservation biologist. His work has involved studying genetic and morphological variations as they relate to ecological interrelationships among various populations of animal species. He has concentrated much of his research on tropical species of lizards. In addition, he has also contributed a number of theoretical papers to the field of population biology, based upon current empirical evidence.

His interests in conservation biology have resulted in his publishing two contemporary texts on the subject. The first text, co-edited with Dr. B. A. Wilcox and published in 1980, is entitled "Conservation Biology: An Evolutionary-Ecological Perspective: The second text is entitled "Conservation and Evolution", was published in 1981, and is co-authored with Dr. O. H. Frankel.

Dr. Soule's talk on Thursday will concentrate on this latter aspect of his work. The talk should be of general interest to anyone interested in conservation biology.

Everyone Welcome!
